Report of the program

On August 4, 2020, the Departments of Sociology and IQAC at Basanti Devi College, in collaboration with the Departments of Sociology and IQAC at Dr. B.R. Ambedkar College, organized a thought-provoking webinar titled “Women’s Language and Writings in Patriarchal Context: A Sociological Perspective.” The webinar attracted 100 participants, including students, scholars, and educators from various institutions.

The session featured two distinguished resource persons: Dr. Basabi Chakraborty, Head and Senior Faculty at the Department of Sociology, Rabindra Bharati University, and Dr. Chandrabali Dutta, Assistant Professor and Head of the Department of Sociology at Hiralal Majumdar Memorial College for Women, Dakhineshwar.

Indrila Guha

Dr. Chakraborty began the webinar with an exploration of how women's language and writings reflect and resist patriarchal structures. Her presentation delved into the ways women writers navigate and challenge societal norms through their work, offering a critical examination of literary texts and their sociological implications. Dr. Dutta followed with a discussion on the intersection of language and gender in a patriarchal society, focusing on how women's writings serve as a form of resistance and empowerment within oppressive contexts.

The webinar was well-received, with participants praising the insightful analyses and engaging discussions. The session provided a deeper understanding of how gendered experiences shape literary expression and offered valuable perspectives on the role of women's writing in challenging patriarchal norms.
