

39. Seminar on Health Economics: An Introduction

Name of the Program	Seminar on Health Economics: An Introduction
Resource Persons	Dr. Arijita Dutta, Professor
Organising Department	Economics & IQAC
Date	28.03.2019
Venue	College Auditorium
Beneficiaries	25

Report of the Program

On March 28, 2019, the Department of Economics and IQAC at Basanti Devi College organized a seminar titled “Health Economics: An Introduction” in the College Auditorium. The seminar was attended by 25 participants, including students, faculty members, and professionals interested in the field of economics and health.

The resource person for the seminar was Dr. Arijita Dutta, a distinguished Professor of Economics. Dr. Dutta delivered an informative and engaging lecture that introduced the fundamental concepts of health economics. Her presentation covered a range of topics, including the economic factors influencing health care systems, the evaluation of health policies, and the principles of cost-effectiveness analysis in health care.

Dr. Dutta explained key concepts such as the economics of health care provision, the role of government and private sectors in health care, and methods for assessing the efficiency of health care interventions. She also discussed the importance of economic analysis in shaping health policies and improving health care outcomes.

Indrila Guha

The seminar provided participants with a solid foundation in health economics, offering insights into how economic theories and methods can be applied to real-world health care issues. Attendees appreciated Dr. Dutta's clear explanations and the opportunity to explore the intersection of economics and health.

The event was well-received, and feedback from participants highlighted the seminar's relevance and the effectiveness of Dr. Dutta's teaching approach.

Highlights of the Program

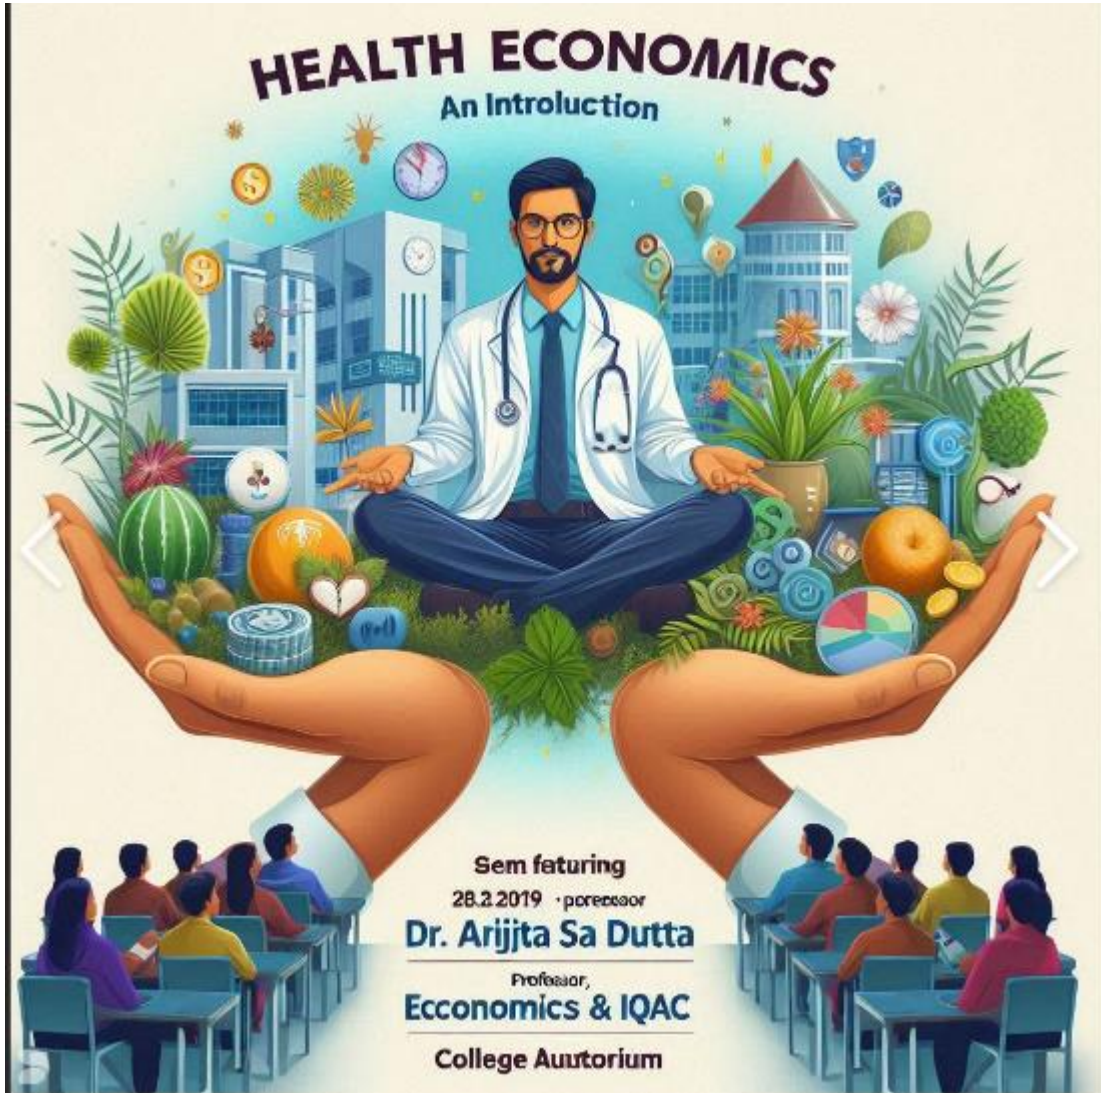

Indrila Guha

Dr. Indrila Guha
Principal
Basanti Devi College

Poster

Indrila Guha

Dr. Indrila Guha
Principal
Basanti Devi College